Aeromedical Management - A Precision Approach

Every year thousands of pilots lose their medical certification because they fail to seek readily available aeromedical advice. Many more are grounded because incomplete or incorrect information is sent to the FAA by their private physician or Aviation Medical Examiner.

Pilots and their employers often rely on basic medical exams to discover potentially jeopardizing health issues. When issues are discovered, FAA medical certification becomes a labor-intensive, bureaucratic process. Even the simplest issue can ground a pilot increasing operational and healthcare expenditures.

In 1995 Pilot Medical Solutions introduced proactive aeromedical management which employs pre-certification screening and supplies preventive vs reactive solutions. This approach provides a confidential FAA medical certification forecast to establish a pilot's eligibility before their official FAA exam and makes it possible to anticipate and prevent the temporary or even the permanent loss of valuable pilot employees.

Pilot Medical Solutions, Inc. has been providing aeromedical services to Airlines, Corporate flight departments and insurance underwriters for over 27 years.
