

Business Aviation on the Web

Pilots click with online resources

By Chad Trautvetter

Pilot Medical Solutions
www.leftseat.com

Since pilots need to stay in good health to continue to fly, it's no surprise that there's a Web site devoted to aviation medicine. Left seat.com is the award-winning place where pilots and aviation medical examiners (AMEs) worldwide obtain information and assistance via the Web. Visitors can find an exclusive list of flight surgeons who are pilots and aviation medical examiners, hundreds of pages of free aeromedical information, free accurate answers to anonymous aeromedical questions and pre-certification screening, which includes online practice FAA medical evaluations. Additional resources include tips for passing your next FAA medical exam; FAA-approved medications; special issuance (waiver) specifications; the AME guide; the federal air surgeon's bulletin; fitness and nutrition information; FAA medical regulations; and FAA medical standards and protocols. The company also provides the following services for a fee: accelerated FAA medical certification; confidential assistance for airline, corporate and private pilots; amnesty petitions for previously unreported conditions; and person-to-person hands-on collaboration.

Continued on next page ▶

Published in Aviation International News, February 2005

Contact Pilot Medical Solutions, Inc.
www.leftseat.com
800-699-4457